Nan, the stepdaughter of Jerry <sup>a</sup>Hawkins who is suspected of being a bank robber by Sheriff Dave Sloan, is called to the tavern by a mysterious note. A stranger is helped to escape by Nan after he has killed a barroom ruffian. Dave, coming to Nan, whom he loves, for information about the killing, finds some currency sacks hidden in the cabin and has his revolver stolen by Nan.

McGraw and Hawkins, partners in crime, go after the unarmed sheriff. They stun him in a fight and return to find Nan about to go with the supposed killer, who gets the drop on Hawkins and McGraw and obtains a signed confession from McGraw admitting the killing. Dave returns and beats up Hawkins and McGraw as they are about to overpower the boy, who turns out to be Nan's brother.
